A new presidential period of eight years was closed, and with it, the most awaited chapter in recent history: the pact to overcome the armed conflict with the FARC, now transformed into a political party. The negotiation table with the ELN and its expectation of continuance also remained on top. Perhaps like no other, the Government of Juan Manuel Santos has the stamp of the search for peace, with great contradictions such as bearing the loss of a plebiscite to endorse peace agreements, but at the same time with a Nobel Peace Prize.

However, in terms of guarantees for the exercise of the defense of human rights and social leadership, the balance in red is large and it is not comprehensible how, in a period marked by a context of peace, its greatest promoters and defenders, especially from the territories, have paid the highest cost. More than 600 people defending human rights, lost their lives, while the government negotiated with the insurgencies, the confrontation was de-escalated and the violence figures decreased.

But the phenomenon goes beyond the figures, which became the “problem itself”, given the multiplication of sources of information, studies on the phenomenon, and the discrepancies between them and those assumed by the Colombian State. Therefore, with this report we want to analyze a little more the issue of the figures; to see, if wanted, where the differences, methods and consequent results lie; but without forgetting, of course, that the centrality lies in a fundamental problem, structural and structuring a very serious pathology, which grows with no measure and is configured as humanitarian and obstacle to continue the search for peace, as it is the criminalization of Colombian social leadership.

We have entitled this report Beyond the Figures, part two, reediting the title of the report from eight years ago, where we focused our attention on the same event. Today, we also try a brief balance of these two periods of government of Juan Manuel Santos in relation to the policy of protection and guarantees for social leaderships and the exercise of the defense of human rights; the reiterated role of the Attorney General’s Office, and of course, we risk some considerations and uncertainties still marked in the matter, with the new government of Iván Duque, especially for his proposals during the campaign, the bad exit of some of his Ministers barely taking possession of their positions, but above all, the political party that he owes to, the Democratic Center and its difficult positions on matters of peace and human rights.

In this brief balance, Beyond the Figures - part two, the progress in regulations is recognized, as well as the willingness to dialogue and agreement between the Government and society, in addition to the negotiation table with the guerrillas; but also, how many traced routes and good intentions were reflected in two institutional roles and narratives, but without developments in practice, problematic ambivalence in the territories, especially where there was much expectation in the arrival of peace, but where, on the contrary, the violence strengthened as hope escaped like water between the fingers.

The Report also highlights the important role of the international community and its efforts in different areas of peace translated into human rights, guarantees, protection, human rights defenders, among others.

And as always, a recognition and an in memoriam to all the women and men who have left their lives in the corner of their homes, on their work space, on the roadside, in the hall of the union headquarters, in the arms of his partner or daughter who wanted to protect him with his body, in the communal house, in the fray of social mobilization... In short, in the daily struggle for the rights of their communities and peoples. But also to defenders who despite the extremely high risks, continue stoically in their territories with intact hope and the strong conviction that Colombia will continue the transition to build a balanced, fair and equitable society, where working for rights will not cost their life.

But as never before, there was a highly positive sensibility awakening in Colombian and foreign society, including media, about the seriousness and indignation before the increase of murders against social leaders, expressed in the “Velatón” for the life of July 6, 2018 (Velatón: figure used to describe a night spent in vigil, in which each attendant lights a candle by midnight, in honor of those who dies fulfilling their work).

And last but not least, the analysis of the figures released by the SIADDHH, which account for the increase in aggression, the most affected social sectors, the most distressed regions, the presumed responsible and the long and sad list of defenders of murdered rights.

We thank the technical support provided to SIADDHH by CINEP; as well as the support of human rights and peace and development platforms such as the CCEEU and other national, regional and local human rights organizations and networks with information that nourish our report. Special thanks to the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights in Colombia - OACNUDH. We also appreciate the financial support of the Royal Norwegian Embassy in Colombia and the international cooperation agencies DIAKONIA, MISEROR, Terre des Hommes - Schweiz, as their support was essential for the completion of this Report.

“We social leaders are the soul of the territories, they are the beacon of their communities, they are a source of democracy, they are the seeds of ancestral knowledge, they are part of the umbilical cord with the earth... They are the hope of peace in the historical conjuncture that Colombia is experiencing. These men and women are this and much more... Their huge sacrifice will not be forgiven by history”.

On January 6, 2018, around 5:40 in the afternoon, the traditional doctor of the Totoró Town Alirio Sánchez was attacked with a sharp instrument in the municipality of Totoroa, Cauca. The crime occurred when Sánchez moved from the market square of the town to the sector known as La Peña, on the way he was intercepted by several individuals who attacked him with a sharp instrument, causing stab wounds to his chest, neck and back.

The traditional doctor was helped by people from the community of La Peña who took him to the local hospital. Due to the severity of the injuries, he was transferred to the University Hospital San José de Popayán. Despite the surgery and being in intensive care, the traditional doctor died on Thursday, around 11:00 AM.

According to the Indigenous Cabildo of Totoró, Alirio Sánchez was a renowned traditional doctor, who had earned the respect of the members of the region due to his community work. In addition to his work as a spiritual leader, Alirio Sánchez sold potatoes in the galleries of Totoró and in the Bolívar neighborhood of Popayán.

According to the available information, on the night of Wednesday, January 17, 2018, the noise of the shots alarmed the residents of houses near the road leading the village of La Rompida 1. Around 8:30 p.m., the president of the CAB (Community Action Board) was hit by bullets that ended his life.

Víctor Manuel Morato, would have left his home at noon to perform some proceedings with his daughter. On his way back home, he was mobilizing alone in the Yondó-Cantagallo road and he was intercepted by two subjects on a motorcycle who shot at him twice. Minutes after hearing the shots, the neighbors of the sector came to the place to aid to the community leader, however when they arrived to the site, his body presented no vital signs.

According to the Victims Association of Crimes of the State - Asorvimm, in the southern region of Bolivar and Yondó there is a constant presence of armed, unknown and hooded actors with rifles committing robberies and intimidating the rural population. The Regional Corporation for the Defense of Human Rights - Credhos also rejected the murder and also indicated that Morato had been reporting some anomalies with the EPM company due to shortcomings in the supply of the light service in the sector, in addition to the presence of the ELN and some micro traffic bands of the Magdalena Medio region.

COMMUNITY ACTION BOARD OF THE SAN PADRITO VILLAGE

On January 18, 2018, in the village of San Pedrito, in the district of Versalles, municipality of San José de Uré, Córdoba Plinio Pulgarín was murdered, apparently by a group of armed men. He was acting as president of the Community Action Board of the San Padrito village.

The information was confirmed by Ulaldo Mercado Sacramento, secretary of the Mayor’s Government of San José de Uré, who said that the crime caused the displacement of several families to the urban perimeter due to the harassment of illegal groups.

Preliminary versions indicate that a group of armed men arrived in the town in order to assassinate Pulgarín, who, in addition to being a community leader, was a member of the Patriotic March, the Association of Peasant Reserve Zones and the National Coordinator of Cultivators of Coca leaves, Marihuana and Opium Poppy, who was also supporting the process of replacing illicit crops that was being carried out after the government agreement with the FARC.

In the municipality of Tame - Arauca, Betoye Indigenous Reserve, community of Juliero, on January 19, 2018, the National Army murdered the indigenous leaders Luis Díaz López, only 22 years old, secretary of the Cabildo and Miller Díaz López who was the prosecutor of the indigenous community of Juliero of the Betoye Town.

According to the information supplied by the regional authorities, around 11:00 PM the indigenous leaders were coming back from carrying out bush-meat hunting activities, a very traditional indigenous task, and when they were only 400 meters away from the hamlet very near from the residence, they were intercepted by members of the National Army, who shot them indiscriminately, taking their lives in the act.

The ONIC, according to declarations of the Indigenous Authorities of the region, informs and denounces that “the National Army moved the bodies to Arauca and presented them as guerrilla members of the ELN, a matter that the community strongly rejects. Before such absurdity and violation of the rights and honor of the indigenous leaders, the community decided to block the road as a protest until the facts are clarified and the Government - National Army rectifies the accusation”.

Peasant Association (ASONALCA)

The peasant leader Arley Johanny Mogollón Becerra, was murdered on January 22, 2018 in the place known as the embankment located on the outskirts of the Saravena - Arauca municipality.

The crime occurred when the peasant leader was riding on a motorcycle with his wife, and arriving to the Cabeceras del Llano neighborhood, near the site known as the embankment, he was forced to descend from the motorcycle by two armed persons, one of whom fired several times against him to take his life.

Arley Johanny Mogollon Becerra, resided in the Caño Negro village. At the age of 22, he worked as coordinator of the Peasant Association (ASONALCA) of District No. 1, he was part of the rural coordinator of the municipality of Saravena and member of the Peasant, Ethnic and Popular Guard of the Political Movement of Social and Popular Masses of the Middle East of Colombia. According to the complaints in this crime, the number of violent deaths recorded during the last week in the Arauca department has risen to 14.

On January 25, 2018 troops of the National Army, the Colombian Air Force and the National Police deployed an operation in the municipality of Chitagá to capture several members of the ELN guerrilla. In the midst of these military actions, the president of the Community Action Board of El Roble, Miguel Eduardo Parra Rondón was killed, since he got caught in the middle of the operation while riding on board a milk recollection vehicle.

This was reported in a communication letter by the Municipal Association of Community Action Boards (Asojuntas) Chitagá, because Parra Rondón, in the middle of the shooting, only “got out of the car and ran off in order to safeguard his life”, they argue. For the Association, the man was a member of the civilian population seeking refuge and he was no member of the ELN, as denounced by the military authorities.

Asojuntas Chitagá added that the community leader stood out in the region for his work on the defense of the environment, the rights and the living conditions of the inhabitants. They also claim that it is “a serious violation of Human Rights and the rules of International Humanitarian Law, thus damaging the image of the community members”, also demanding the case to be investigated in order to guarantee the right to the victims.

Eleazar Tequia Vitucay, 41, who participated in an Educational “Minga” (Joint meeting of friends and neighbors to do some common work, after which they share a generous meal paid by the beneficiaries) to claim the rights to Education, was killed by a gunshot on the night of Friday, January 26, 2018. Tequia was for 10 years the coordinator of the indigenous guard of the Embera Katío del Dieciocho community, on the road that leads from Quibdó to Medellín, in the municipality of Carmen de Atrato.

The community and the Association of Wounaan Indigenous Councils, Emberá Dovida, Katío, Chamí and Tule del Chocó (Asorewa) point to the National Army as responsible for this murder, which, according to community accounts, occurred when the protest, which started on January 22, was already over and people were returning to their communities. The events happened at 10:56 p.m. and after the murder, the indigenous guard retained two soldiers and held on to their weapons. One of them was handed over on Saturday to representatives of the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) as he was “bruised” because he was beaten when he was detained; the other soldier was delivered a day later.

Several indigenous and religious authorities and human rights organizations traveled to the site, and the community called on the Ombudsman to intervene in this critical situation. The community demanded immediate demilitarization. “If not, we will throw them out ourselves.” They also asked the UN to summon the authorities and international representatives urgently. “We are tired... We have been abused for many years and all the cases have gone unpunished, if the UN does not get really involved, we will have to do everything on our own,” they said after the leader’s death.

Temístocles Machado
Buenaventura - Valle del Cauca
Buenaventura Civic Strike Committee

Temístocles Machado, leader of the Afro communities of Buenaventura Valle del Cauca, was murdered on January 27, 2018 in the city of Buenaventura. The event occurred around 6:00 p.m. in the Isla de La Paz neighborhood, about 20 minutes by motor-cycle from downtown Buenaventura.

Temístocles Machado was in a parking lot near his house when he was approached by two men on a motor-cycle who arrived through the internal alternate route, on the east of the port. Without a word, he was shot twice in the head. Despite the efforts of the community to save his life, the leader of the Afro-Colombian communities of Buenaventura was taken to the hospital but arrived there with no vital signs.

The murder of the 58 year old social leader of the civic strike and Buenaventura land defender, Temístocles Machado, raised the alarm about the security of social leaders and made it clear that the land conflict in the main port on the Pacific coast is very strong. In addition, the death of ‘don Themis’, as he was known among the people of Buenaventura, jeopardizes the progress of the commitments agreed upon with the Strike.

Diana Patricia Mejía Fonseca who worked with the ICBF as a teacher and community mother, in Candelaria la Nueva neighborhood in the city of Bogotá, was murdered in the afternoon of February 3, 2018. Diana Patricia was in her home reunited with her family hours before the homicide, where she enjoyed the company of her loved ones. Apparently about 10:15 a.m. she went out to perform several procedures concerning her work.

At 5:45 p.m. The community mother called a friend and told her to accompany her because she had one more pending task to do. Diana went out with her friend, they were walking really slow. According to the available versions, the two women passed nearby a place where her husband was. He seemed to have observed that she was in the company of a friend, when all of a sudden, a medium-sized subject came out of nowhere, he drew a weapon, reached the community mother and mercilessly fired two bullets through her head.

The community leader Carlos Eduardo Melo Ramírez, was assassinated on February 5, 2018 in the city of Bogotá. The incident occurred when Carlos Eduardo was walking near his place of residence, when a man abruptly approached him and apparently stabbed him twice with a knife, killing him immediately. The fact is registered in the security cameras of the sector. The surveillance equipment also captured the moment when the neighbors reached the victim and took him to a health center. Carlos Eduardo was immediately transferred to a hospital in a cab that was in the sector.

Carlos Eduardo Melo Ramírez, 50 years old, was known among the residents of the sector because of the communal work he carried out in the Antonio José de Sucre neighborhood in the district of Usme, Bogotá. For this reason, the authorities investigate the aggressor’s reasons for taking his life. This is not the first leader killed in Usme; in 2017 at least 2 leaders were allegedly killed for opposing micro-trafficking actions in the area.

On February 6, 2018, the body of Sandra Yaneth Luna was found. She was the President of the Community Action Board of the Tutumito Carbonera village in the Campo Dos township, municipality of Tibú, Norte de Santander. According to information, armed men had removed her from her home on September 27, 2017.

The kidnapping of Sandra Yaneth Luna occurred in the area called La Silla. One of the hypotheses that the authorities handle is that her crime would be related to a complaint made by her before the Gaula about a case of extortion, in which common criminal groups would be involved.

The finding of the corpse, reported the Police of Norte de Santander, occurred on Tuesday, February 6 in the village of La Primavera, in the Petrolea township of Tibú (Norte de Santander). In the inspection of the body, forensic experts established that the victim had three wounds produced with a firearm: one in the head and the other two in the right side of her body.

Armed men arrived on the night of Friday, February 9, 2018, to the village of La Soledad in the municipality of Guapi, on the Pacific Coast of Cauca. The leaders Jesús Orlando Grueso Obregón and Jhonatan Cundumí Anchino were murdered. Receiving 10 and 13 rifle hits respectively is a proof that the double crime was not only due to the simple contempt of the armed stoppage order of the ELN, but also to the leadership of people of African descent in the socialization of the National Program for the Replacement of Crops of Illicit Use. (PNIS).

Jesús Orlando and Jhonatan were members of the Ethnic and Popular Movement of the Pacific - MOEP, of the National Coordinator of Coca, Poppy and Marijuana Cultivators COCCAM and of the Political and Social Movement Patriotic March in the Department of Cauca and they had been promoting the process of gradual substitution and voluntary cultivation of illicit crops in the Framework of point 4 of the Havana agreement.

Álvaro Arango
Tumaco - Nariño
Community of the La Guayacana Township

On February 13, 2018, in the rural area of the municipality of Tumaco, the social leader Álvaro Arango was assassinated. The 69-year-old leader from Tumaco, died, is his farm, located at kilometer 76, of the road that leads from Tumaco to Pasto in the Guayacana Township. Apparently, strangers approached the home of Arango, called him out and then shot him seven times.

Those responsible for the murder fled on a high-capacity motorcycle towards an unknown destination after committing the crime. A person who was at the scene of the crime called Alvaro’s wife, Mariela Rubiela Cortez, to inform her about his death, and then went to the leader’s house. Álvaro Arango, recognized leader of the sector, left two orphan sons. 25 years ago he arrived in Tumaco from Medellin and committed himself to the raising of chickens and pigs. He was also a beneficiary of the PNIS and would have been pressured by FARC dissidents for entering that program. There is a lot of fear in the community to tell on this situation.

On March 20, José Aníbal Herrera had been ‘off the grid’ since the minute he left on a motorcycle taxi, heading from Valdivia towards the village of El Aro de Ituango. After a week of searching, his body was found in the waters of the Cauca River, in the jurisdiction of the municipality of Caucasia. It is not ruled out that the leader drowned while trying to escape an armed attack.
The disappearance of the leader José Aníbal Herrera also generated several contradictory statements among the authorities themselves, since the Mayor of Valdivia had reported the finding of the corpse several days ago, but the version was denied by the Army and the Police.

José, served as spokesman in that population of the Municipal Commission for Participatory Planning of the National Comprehensive Plan of Substitution, formed from the implementation of point four of the peace agreement between the Colombian Government and the FARC on crops for illicit use. In his career as a rural leader, he was co-founder of the Association of Peasants of Bajo Cauca (Asobac), president of the Association of Peasants of Toledo, president of the Community Action Board of La Meseta and coordinator of the Municipal Committee of Valdivia Coca leaf growers created on February 17, 2017 in Puerto Valdivia.

On March 25, 2018, in the village of Jaguas in the municipality of Caucasia, Bajo Cauca, Antioquia, Víctor Alfonso Zabala Oviedo and Jorge Miguel Polanco Ávila were assassinated. These two social leaders were approached by heavily armed men.

According to the report supplied by relatives of the victims, the first thing to happen was that Mr. Zabala Oviedo was murdered on a farm in the village of Jaguas at around 5:00 pm on Sunday, March 25. Zabala was the president of the Community Action Board of the El Rizo village in the municipality of Cáceres, Bajo Cauca and he was part of the crop substitution program.

Minutes later, the social and peasant leader Jorge Miguel Polanco Ávila was violently removed from a farm, his home, located in the village of Caño Prieto, municipality of Cáceres. He was, against his will, transferred to rural area of Caucasia, where he was murdered by subjects who carried long-range rifles. This happened around 5:30 p.m. Sunday. Polanco Ávila had been president of the Community Action Board of Caño Prieto, municipality of Cáceres.

The attack, according to declarations, was allegedly perpetrated by men belonging to the Caparrapos. In principle it was indicated that the double crime was executed in the village of Caño Prieto, but it was clarified by the authorities that both homicides were committed in rural area of Caucasia.

HÉCTOR JÁNER LATÍN
CORINTO - CAUCA
PROCESS OF LIBERATION OF MOTHER EARTH – CORINTO

Hector Janer Latin, liberator of Mother Earth in Corinto, Cauca, was murdered on March 30, 2018. The incident happened at 6:40 p.m. when Héctor Jáner went from Corinto to El Guanábano on a motorcycle. In the crossing of Gualanday, unknown men stopped him, killed him with gunshots, took the motorcycle and left his documents and cell phone behind. The murder occurred in the same place where minutes before the army had installed a military checkpoint. A checkpoint that is normally installed in that spot.

The murder of Héctor Jáner takes place in the context of escalation of the war in the territory of northern Cauca in which guerrilla groups, or those who call themselves that, challenge community autonomy by sowing terror and paramilitary groups also operate in the territory, while the Public Force seems to be absent.

According to information received, Héctor Jáner was a happy and active man in the liberation; always with a fun commentary or a joke, supportive and attentive in times of emergency. The young liberators called him “The ugly” to focus his attention when he got too intense, but not even that made the Nasa leader lose his smile.

Claudio Chaves
San José del Palmar - Chocó
Victims Association of San José del Palmar - Asovicopal

Four armed men murdered the victim’s defender Wilson Quetama, and the peasant leader Claudio Chaves in a rural area of San José del Palmar, department of Chocó.
According to the information of the witnesses, the victims went to a meeting with the community in the La Italia Township, where alleged members of the ELN guerrillas arrived, they tied up Quetama and shot him repeatedly until he died. Then they took Chaves to another place where they also murdered him.

General Mauricio Moreno, commander of the Task Force Titan of the Army, declared that the Prosecutor’s Office appointed a special group to investigate this crime, which is causing anguish among the residents of San José de Palmar. “The Office of the Prosecutor assigned a specialized group to establish who was responsible and how this happened, they are the competent authority on this issue” said the commander.

The pressure of the ELN in this area has become strong due to the departure of the FARC from these territories and in this framework they have started a process of co-optation of the population and leaders who, like Quetama and Chaves, were affected by opposing the presence of the FARC’s new group.

The ASOINCA organization and the Bureau for the defense of human rights, life and territory denounced the murder of Efrén Zúñiga, in the municipality of Piendamó, Cauca, on April 14. The relatives of the social leader said that the teacher left his house to negotiate a farm in the municipality of Piendamó, where his body was found with a bullet in the head. They also claimed that Efren was apparently tortured and forced to dig his own grave.

According to Tito Torres, president of ASOINCA, 43 social leaders, trade unionists and human rights defenders in Cauca have been murdered this year, which, in turn, shows “the permanent and systematic violation of human rights addressed to those who belong to the social movement in Cauca”. He also said that behind these acts there are paramilitary structures that have claimed domain over the territory, despite the multiple complaints that have been made to the authorities on the increase of this armed actor in Cauca.

Zúñiga was a renowned teacher of the municipality with several years of work in the district. He stood out due to his work and commitment to his students on the search for options different to war in the municipality.

JAMES LUIS JIMÉNEZ ESTRADA TURBO—ANTIOQUIA
COMMUNITY ACTION BOARD OF CACAHUAL, SAN VICENTE DEL CONGO TOWNSHIP

James Jiménez was murdered during the morning of April 20, in the village of Santa Rosa de San Pedro de Urabá, while he was at his brother’s house. He had extensive knowledge in several of the problems that afflict his territory, especially the processes of formalization and restitution of land and substitution of illicit crops.

His work from the Community Action Board was an addition to a land reclamation process that he carried out and also accompanied other farmers in that task; situation that made him a target for several armed groups operating in the area. Both the death of this social leader and the fact of violence that occurred on April 11 in the village of El Tomate in San Pedro de Urabá, where eight members of the Public Force died, when they accompanied proceedings related to the restitution of land; they reflect the State’s inability to ensure restitu-

Apparently, strangers intercepted him when he was on his way to his Reservation.

One of the leaders of that community confirmed via radio, the finding of the body of the indigenous leader of the Embera Chami unified community. The leader said that Gonzalez was also an active leader, he had been an indigenous governor and also a member of the guard. He added that although his partner was threatened for several years, they do not know for sure why he would have been killed.

The community also indicated that the victim was a ‘jaibaná’ (traditional doctor) within that community and was engaged in the work of collecting coffee in Sanctuary (Risaralda). He said that since Friday he had told his family that he was going to visit them over the weekend and that when he was on his way, strangers intercepted him and finished them.

The Community assures that several leaders, including González, have been threatened. They have received pamphlets and calls, among other intimidations. During a raid carried out by hired assassins, two union leaders of the Nestlé factory were murdered inside a house located in the Sol y Luna neighborhood in the municipality of Andalucía, Valle. The double homicide was perpetrated on Wednesday, May 23 at 10 p.m. in a building of that population in the center of the department. Cristian Andrés Lozano, 31, and Luis Eduardo Domínguez Blandón, 22, were shot in the head and thorax and killed.

According to Lieutenant-Colonel Guillermo Alejandro Carreño Arbeláez, commander of the Second Police District, it seems that the aggressor was known to the victims and once he murdered them he fled, leaving the door of the house closed, which is the reason why the authorities had to force the entry to access the site.

Carreño ruled out that these homicides are related to the murder occurred on May 13 in the Bugalagrande’s neighborhood La María, of Gilberto Espinosa Victoria, 52, better known as ‘Tito’, who also worked at the Nestlé factory and who was provided with protection measures, as he had reported to the Prosecutor’s Office death threats sent to him by certified mail. However, the coincidence is extreme, considering the reopening of judicial proceedings around the well-known “dragon operation” that linked para-militaries and members of the public force who intercepted, harassed and persecuted social leaders and union leaders of Valle del Cauca, where SINALTRAINAL was affected.

La Argentina - Huila.
Citizen Oversight Process ‘Vemos Todo’ (We See It All). Colombia Humana Coalition.

Gabriel Muñoz was killed when armed men fired on several occasions against the leader and electoral attorney of the Colombia Humana committee in Argentina. According to the authorities, the leader was traveling through a forest area of the Las Águias village, 20 minutes away from the urban area of La Argentina, where he was attacked with a firearm by unknown persons, after having finished a political meeting in which he coordinated the electoral agenda.

Gabriel was a peasant leader who had been reporting alleged corruption on the way schools manage their feeding processes in his community. In addition, he was a defender of territory and water; he was a member of ‘Vemos Todo’ (We See It All), a process of citizen oversight with a high social commitment. He was to serve as a delegate to the 23rd table of his municipality for the presidential elections, on behalf of the Colombia Humana coalition.

El Dovio - Valle del Cauca
Embera Chamí Town. Indigenous Reservation Hai Kera Wera

The 52-year-old indigenous leader, identified as Amilgar Yagari Siegama and member of the shelter Hai Kera Wera, was killed in the rural area of El Dovio, where, apparently, he had arrived displaced from a community located in Bolívar, north of Valle del Cauca. “In the existing background, which is being verified, it is reported that he was displaced by threats in the community where he was before,” said Noralba García, Secretary of Security Valle del Cauca. García declared that “they came for him, they forced him out and, unfortunately, they murdered him”.

The man had wounds caused by firearm on several parts of his body and he would have been killed by people wearing ski masks. Rafael Ulcué, who is part of the Human Rights team of the Valle indigenous organization, Orivac, said that the victim had been receiving threats. The leader was killed by hit men in the presence of his own family.

Juvenal Silva Manchola
La Montañita - Caquetá
Miramar village Community

In a supposed confrontation between the Army and residual groups of the FARC, Juvenal Silva, community leader of the Municipality of La Montañita, was murdered. According to the authorities, eleven people killed and two injured, including a minor, was the result of an alleged case in the Miramar village of this municipality.
According to official accounts, the combat originated after the Army was alerted of the presence of a group of subjects (who apparently were former members of fronts 7, 13 and 14 and now belonged to the FARC dissidences) commanded by alias ‘Cabezas’. Another version delivered by the authorities, states that the alleged group of dissidents had forcibly taken several civilians, and apparently during the conflict, 11 people were killed, including two civilians: The leader, Juvenal Silva and a worker of his farm identified with the name of Jeferson Monrroy.

However, Ludivia Galindez, the communal leader of the area, confirmed in open sources, how the FARC dissidents took leader Silva and a worker against their will, demanding to be transported in a vehicle owned by the leader. After that, an attack was made by the Military Forces where the community leader died. In fact, the leaders of the zone met with high-ranking Army commanders so that this leader is not included as a guerrilla member since he was a victim of kidnapping.

DELMAYRO REYES GONZÁLEZ
DAGUA - VALLE DEL CAUCA
DAGUA EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTION

The incident occurred in the village of El Palmar de Dagua, around 7:00 p.m., when two gunmen approached the teacher and shot him several times causing his death. The teacher Delmayro Reyes González, respected by the educational community and who had fought against the consumption of marijuana and other substances in his school, was killed with a gun by a man who followed him for several meters, while the educator waited for the bus that would take him to Cali where he lived with his family.

The prosecutor’s report says that “according to the investigation, the victim had finished his academic day and was ready to return to Cali, where he lived, and when he was in the vicinity of the pedestrian bridge, waiting for transportation, he was approached by two subjects on a motorcycle and the one in the passenger seat shot him with a firearm several times, killing him, after which the perpetrators fled the scene”.

Orlando Negrete Ramírez, 40, president of the Community Action Board of Camu Las Delicias, was killed while he was with family and friends attending a sportive event in the area, in the afternoon of June 2, in the municipality of Tierralta, Córdoba. Orlando Negrete, who was popularly known as El Coco, “was enjoying a football match when two guys arrived and shot him, causing him to die at the scene”, said Colonel Marcelo Napoleón Russi, commander of the Córdoba police.

Negrete, besides being the president of the Community Action Board of the Las Delicias sector of the municipality of Tierralta, was a citizen overseer of public works. The man received 12 shots and became the seventh community leader killed in southern Córdoba to the date. Apparently, his interest and follow-up to the inconclusive public works of the municipality and his constant denunciation of the facts, would be related to his death.

In Bocas de Satinga, the administrative center of the Olaya Herrera municipality, an unidentified gunman opened fire against human rights defender Carlos Jimmy Prado Gallardo. According to residents of the area, the victim served as the legal representative of the Satinga Joven movement, and was a national delegate of the board for prior consultation of black people, Palenque Afro-Colombians, and raizales (indigenous) in Nariño, and belonged to the board of directors of the Association of Community Councils and Ethnic Territorial Organizations.

In the framework of its community work, Prado Gallardo had attended a session on Friday in which members of the aforementioned movements and delegates from local and departmental administrations participated. Later, around 4:00 a.m. on Saturday, he left towards his place of residence. In the evening hours, after the meeting, a young but still unidentified man arrived to his residence and without saying a word, he shot him in several occasions, leaving him on the verge of death. Although he was transferred to a health center, the leader died two hours later due to the severity of the injuries caused by the bullets.

Francisco José Guerra
Ituango - Antioquia
Community Action Board of the El Mandarino village

The authorities of Ituango, Antioquia, confirmed the murder of the president of the El Mandarino Community Action Board, Francisco José Guerra. The incident occurred on Saturday, June 9, when men arrived to his home and shot him repeatedly.

Faced with these facts, several organizations defending human rights have demanded urgent measures in the department of Antioquia, because including this homicide, 9 defenders have been murdered in the territory.

The inhabitants of the village said that this fact could be related to the different actions carried out by Guerra for the defense of the territory due to the pressure of projects such as Hydroituango in the area. However, the authorities expressed that they are in the process of investigation.

Jeisson Ramírez, president of the La Yet Community Action Board, was killed in the rural area of the Guamez Valley, in the department of Putumayo, on June 10. The facts were presented when Ramírez was with his partner in a store having a soft drink when armed men approached him and shot him several times causing him to die.

The residents of the village said that this could be related to the different actions that Ramírez carried out for the defense of the territory through the intervention of hydrocarbon exploitation companies. Also in the area there are important interests of armed groups for the control of illegal businesses like extortion and collection of ‘vaccines’ (illicit practice by means of which a group of armed actors force the owners of local and legal businesses to pay a high amount of money in exchange for not hurting them or their families).

Holman Mamian was a member of ASOINCA and a recognized teacher of the agricultural educational institution Santa Rita, in the municipality of La Vega, Cauca. The facts took place on June 12, when Mamian was heading to his work, where he was approached by men who shot him repeatedly.

According to Mario Daza, director of ASOINCA, Mamian was focused on the union work that was part of the organization with high visibility in the municipality of La Vega, which is why he considers that his murder may be related to his social activism. In addition, he pointed out that these facts have become systematic in Cauca, “we see how the social and peasant leaders continue to be murdered, without the national nor departmental government moving a finger”.

Community of the Maracaibo Township and Hacarí Group of Youngsters

On June 21, the young cultural and peasant leader Cristian Andrey Rodríguez Sánchez was violently murdered, in a rural area of the municipality of Hacarí, Norte de Santander. According to police sources, those responsible for this homicide would be members of the EPL, better known as ‘Los Pelusos’.

According to the authorities, the incident occurred in the morning hours of Wednesday, in the village of La Esperanza, where the body of the victim was found with several bullet wounds. “An unfortunate fact is registered in the rural area of Hacarí. A 19-year-old person was killed. At this moment we are working on the investigation and the first conclusion is that the armed action was perpetrated by Los Pelusos”, said Colonel George Quintero, commander of the Police of Norte de Santander.

Rodríguez was an active member of the Maracaibo community of that municipality in Norte de Santander and also part of the groups of the Hacarí young activists, who worked for cultural options for their people in the municipality.

Héctor Anteliz, a member of ASCAMCAT and social leader of Teorama, was murdered in Norte de Santander. According to the information gathered by the community, Anteliz was held captive by armed men who arrived to his home on Friday, June 22. His body was found on the road the next day, with several bullet wounds.

Olga Quintero, spokeswoman for ASCAMCAT, said that four men arrived at the leader’s home and told Anteliz to accompany them because “the commander” needed to talk to him. Although the leader’s family opposed this, the armed men assured that nothing wrong would happen. The inhabitants said that later on they found the body during the morning of the next day, down the road. However, only until his sons arrived to the cited place on a motorcycle, the body was moved to a medical center.

ASCAMCAT said in a press release that Anteliz was a human rights defender in Teorama, coordinator of the committee and president of the San José Community Action Board. He also pointed out that no armed structure operating in the territory has taken responsibility for this act.

Community Action Board of the Pascuita Village

The authorities are investigating the murder of José Abraham García, president of the Community Action Board of Pascuita, municipality of Ituango, north of Antioquia. According to the information of the authorities, during the night, men who on board a motorcycle repeatedly shot the social leader in the small populated area of the village.

To this rural area, which is located three hours away from the urban perimeter, members of the National Army arrived to initiate the investigations, in a village where there are coca leaf crops and the presence of the recidivist group that belonged to the Farc, front 36. In addition, there have been reports of clashes over the control of territories between this group and members of the criminal band Clan del Golfo.

According to the National Police, the leader José Abraham García was part of the coca farmers who in March held a protest demonstration in the municipality of Ituango and continued to work organizing the peasants around the agreed upon crop substitution.

North of Antioquia Bareque Committees Association

The Network of Social and Peasant Organizations of the North of Antioquia denounced that Julio César Sucerquia, founding member of the North of Antioquia Bareque Committees Association (artisanal small-scale miners) was assassinated in the village of Mote, rural area of the Ituango municipality.

Sucerquia was attacked with a firearm two kilometers from the humanitarian refugee camp, which he was a part of, “due to the humanitarian crisis in which the members of the association find themselves due to the damming of the upstream of the Cauca river” consequence of the effects of the Hidroituango project.

This dam is in emergency due to a landslide that blocked the tunnel that diverts the waters of the Cauca River, the second largest channel in the country, and which were dammed in an unfinished reservoir and put it at risk of collapse. Social organizations say they are frightened “in the face of continuous degradation of security” in their “territories, which makes the submission to continuous violations of Human Rights imminent.”

They also warned of the “imminent danger” to which the communities of northern Antioquia are exposed, and whose risks are maximized for those people who are organized in the different social movements.

A human rights defender or social leader is in itself, a person who builds peace, democracy, country and society. In Colombia, especially in the popular sectors, both rural and urban, where the absence of the State is evident, the role of these leaders becomes fundamental to the extent that it creates the bridge between the communities and the state and government institutions, in the pursuit of vindication of their rights. Consequently, the aggression or in the worst case, the murder of a male or female leader, is a blow of incalculable proportions for the communities. Hence when there’s a purpose to silence a community that seeks changes or improvement of their situations and those affect particular interests, the strongest message that can be sent is to blind the lives of its leaders.

Eight years ago, also at a time of change of government, the Program We Are Defenders entitled its semi-annual analysis “Beyond the figures” as a way of meaning that, in the case of the analysis of assaults on HR defenders, it is imperative to go beyond the cold statistical data. That the tragedy which continues “in crescendo” against the Colombian social leadership, should attract the attention of the State, the media and society as a whole, as that, as a human tragedy. Today, when the phenomenon does not stop, that call made 8 years ago is even stronger.

Thus, on this occasion and almost a decade later, this report claims the same title and tries to lead the observation and discussion of the violence against these people towards the same subject, given that the situation does not improve. This being the case, this chapter of the Report presents a brief analysis of the key situations that occurred in the first six months of 2018 that affect the exercise of the defenders, as well as a review of the progress and setbacks of the closing government (Juan Manuel Santos) and the challenges faced by the arriving one (Iván Duque).

All of the Reports... All of them.

2018 continues with the trend presented since the previous year in relation to the diversity of reports, analyzes and observations on the phenomenon of violence against human rights defenders and their organizations; which is something positive since, the more information there is in the media and social networks, the more attention and sensitivity of society is achieved and that will be reflected on more pressure... that can be put on the State, since they have been living this invisible and silent drama for several decades.

However, these reports, although they coincide in the reasons for the violence and areas of affectation, differ from each other in terms of figures, which has its origin in several reasons: On one hand, many stop only in the field of murders, but do not contextualize them with a broader or more detailed analysis of other types of attacks such as threats, attacks, retentions, judicial proceedings, sexual violence or information theft, among others. On the other hand, periods of time and references from different contexts are taken, which generates disparity in accounting. Likewise, many studies are carried out based on secondary sources and do not have verification mechanisms in the field, generating, of course, different understanding frames. But what all the analyzes agree on is the growth of aggression, the inability of the State and government to stop it and the serious impact on the peace context that it implies.

Added to this is the confusion, partly created by the Colombian State, especially from the Attorney General’s Office, who by giving “official figures” of investigations into murders of human rights defenders, reduces the number only to the corresponding processes in recent years, a very short period (2016, 2017 and 2018), without giving an account of the broad universe of cases of previous years or at least, of the last two presidential periods.

But in the middle of this context, from the Program We Are Defenders, we try to contribute to clarify the scene, for which a review of all the reports and pronouncements published at the closing date of this document (July 2018) was made to analyze its content and identify common points, differences and possible outputs to the problem.

These measurements are in addition to the publication of figures in reports such as CERAC / CINEP, Pacifista, International Crisis Group, Front Line Defenders and International Amnesty, among others, which are based on secondary sources (such as the reports mentioned above) with the multiplicity of diverse figures and different interpretations about the phenomenon of assassination of social leaders.

So, after the exercise of comparing the reports, the difference in the dispersion of figures lies in the fact that each document has a different definition of who is a human rights defender and also has a different methodology for the survey, systematization, characterization, analysis and data exposure, which makes each report have different counts and analyzes in obedience also to different periods of observation.

But beyond the figures, the truth is, and all reports agree about this, that the murder of human rights defenders in Colombia is increasing, without effective policies by the State and National Government to prevent it. To this is added the lack of political decision of the National Government to create an information system or its own statistics that accounts for the real magnitude of the problem, clinging to a facilitative attitude to rely exclusively on the documentation work of the Office of the High Commissioner of the United Nations for Human Rights in Colombia - OACNUDH, somehow ignoring the figures of the Ombudsman’s Office, institution of the State itself.

As example of this situation are the words of Attorney General Néstor Humberto Martínez when he says “... we must say it clearly: The State’s function is not to count dead people and, therefore, what we have to do as a society is to preserve their lives”. With this phrase, the Prosecutor does not know that the two actions are not mutually exclusive and they both are the responsibility of one and the same State, when it actually requires qualitative and quantitative studies and analyzes for the construction of public policy to guarantee the life and physical integrity of the citizens.

The District Attorney also forgets the recommendation of the Office of the Solicitor General of the Nation contained in Directive 002 of 2017, Point Sixteenth, according to which the National Government must create a single, integrated, consolidated and updated record of persons who have been violated in their rights (human rights defenders).

With this background, the most effective way to minimize the differences on the various reports of murders of social leaders in the country, is that once and for all the Colombian Government and State, assume the political responsibility of having a single registry of defenders attacked and murdered and build a mechanism of reception and documentation of cases that produces a state figure collecting all these reports, and stop clinging to the figures that thanks to the excellent work of the OHCHR, the government gets with no effort at all.

But also, beyond the figures of murders of social leaders, it is necessary to make visible and focus on the situation of those who have not yet been affected, but who surely are at high risk and continue their work under fear levels, uncertainty and insecurity. Undoubtedly, this is the new challenge of civil society and, in particular, of the Colombian State. And here is the question: How is the Colombian State doing in terms of prevention of attacks on these human rights defenders?

THE “Dwarf” JUST GOT BIGGER

What in principle was believed to be a slight escalation of armed actions by actors seeking to take control over the ex-FARC areas, became a new regionalized conflict, which has nothing to do with skirmishes of criminal gangs.

The first semester of 2018 was the scene of an increase in the generalized violence in several regions of the country that until last year showed the lowest homicide rates ever recorded. According to the District Attorney’s Office, the national homicide rate increased again by 7.2% in 2018, and to this date, the strategy to reduce this situation, remains unclear. This figure is validated with the partial reactivation of acts of violence of the former armed conflict, such as the massacres:

El Tarra (Norte de Santander)⁹, Algeria (Cauca)¹⁰, El Tandil¹¹ and Magúí Payan (Nariño)¹² and Vegáchí (Antioquia)¹³ that produced around 40 fatal victims, all of them civilians.

This situation also has another important alteration which is the reactivation of the forced displacements in the country that, according to the United Nations Agency for Refugees - UNHCR, added more than 90 thousand people in 2017¹⁴ and only the Ombudsman’s Office has already accounted for 17,825 displaced persons between January and June 2018. In addition, the Kroc Institute evidences in its most recent report, a recrudescence not only of forced displacement but also of confinement and permanent threats to communities in regions such as the Pacific platform (Chocó, Valle, Cauca and Nariño), Uribá (Chocó, Antioquia and Córdoba) and Catatumbo (Cesar and Norte de Santander)¹⁵.

This violence stems from the confrontations between ELN, EPL, but also from the Gaitanist Self-Defense Forces of Colombia (Clan del Golfo) and narco-paramilitary groups such as “Los Caparrapos”, who would be supported by Mexican drug dealing cartels, and concentrates on same ex-FARC zones where, coincidentally, there are also the highest levels of murder of social leaders: Norte de Santander, Cesar, Córdoba, Antioquia, Chocó, Valle del Cauca, Cauca, Nariño and Putumayo.

But we must detail the state of each of these actors and on whom is focused the violence they exercise.

To this brief description of the armed groups that still operate in Colombia, we must add the action of an endless number of small bands and “combos” (gangs) of organized crime that commit crimes in cities and rural areas with an ineffective action by the State to stop them, such as “Los Puntilleros” (Meta), “Los Caparrapos” (Magdalena Medio), “La Oficina” (Medellín) or “La Coordillera” (Risaralda), to name just a few, who would also have presumed responsibility in the violence against social leaders as it has been confirmed by the Office of the Attorney General of the Nation in the progress of investigations for crimes against defenders recently: “The results presented by the Prosecutor’s Office show that the perpetrators of these crimes are, in greater importance, members of the Gulf Clan and Organized Crime Groups”.16

“Águilas Negras” (Black Eagles)

To this is added the “dark hole” in which the existence or not of the group so-called “Black Eagles” has become responsible for approximately 60% of the threats against social leaders from 2006 to date, and that according to the government (both Uribe and Santos) does not exist, but they continue to threaten in different areas of the country. Since then, the Human Rights organizations in Colombia have demanded from the State, to investigate and clarify who is behind the dozens of threatening pamphlets (virtual most of the time) and whose supposed author is the “Black Eagles”\textsuperscript{17}.

The responses of the authorities in recent years to the perpetration of these threats seem to always be the same: lack of complaint, difficulty tracking the origin of the pamphlet, inability to build a methodological route of investigation, the crime was not criminalized (situation that changes with the issuance of Law 1908 of 2018), etc. The truth is that impunity in cases of threats, and especially threats of the “Black Eagles”, is 100%.

The organizations that defend human rights have repeatedly expressed the lack of political will to advance in these investigations, through spaces such as the National Board of Guarantees (a space where progress in the matter was demanded) or the National Commission of Security Guarantees, derived from the Havana Agreement, where the responsibility is precisely focused on revealing who is behind this type of organizations, however its progress is null.

Nevertheless, after years of observation of this phenomenon, it is possible to presume that behind these threats could be a mixture of illegal actors and legal persons who, from the State institutions, provide information on names, action scenarios, dynamics of organizations social, and in some kind of “outsourcing” for this type of criminal activities that continue to fight a dirty war to frighten and generate anxiety, especially on social leadership. An irrefutable proof of this model of outsourcing was the new finding of the authorities that in August 2018 unveiled a company in the southwest of the country, commanded by a retired General of the National Police, which illegally intercepted communications against all kinds of people including trade unionists and social leaders\textsuperscript{18}.

To broaden the analysis of this topic, we return to the conclusions of the Peace and Reconciliation Foundation, from an unpublished study that is consistent with many of the theories that the movement of human rights defenders in Colombia has had for years about the “Black Eagles”:

1. The Black Eagles do not exist as a criminal structure. There was no record of camps, leaders or armed commandos revealing their existence. Instead, what was found is that:

   - Some criminal groups, such as the Gulf Clan, when they perpetrate criminal operations that leave many victims dead or that are very violent, they do under the name of Black Eagles to not be identified. This was what happened in Norte de Santander in the war between Rastrojos and Urabaños or Clan del Golfo.

\textsuperscript{18} https://www.semana.com/nacion/articulo/chuzadas-ilegales-los-secretos-de-la-red-deespionaje-en-colombia/579805
There are legal sectors, such as alleged businessmen, politicians or individuals, who hire assassins to kill or intimidate people, and use the name of Águilas Negras. That is, Colombia has generated illegal mercenaries that are used as private security groups.

2. Evidence was found that institutional agents use pamphlets with the name of Águilas Negras to intimidate communities, individuals and even groups of young people with violent behavior. Maybe Caquetá some years ago, is the best example.

3. They also found that the name of Black Eagles is used by individuals, through pamphlets, to spread fear in different communities.

4. Perhaps the last interesting conclusion is a summary of all the previous points, and it is that in most cases the use of the name of Black Eagles has political purposes, far from being simple common crime groups that seeks to extort.”

This complex situation of public order contrasts with the few results of the Ministry of Defense in the matter, which concentrated many of its efforts in the eradication of crops, neglecting the safety of leaders and defenders. In this regard, the national government launched the “Horus Plan” which, despite the effort, has not delivered the expected results, as indicated in the most recent report of the Kroc Institute:

“Regarding preventive security deployment, in the 160 prioritized municipalities, progress has been made with five (5) Joint Task Forces and the start of deployment in rural areas of 27 municipalities through the “Horus Plan”. This deployment is complemented by the work of rural police through the Police Unit for the Building of Peace (UNIPEP) and the Basic Carabineros Units (UBICAR), particularly around the ETCR, part of the “Safe and Peaceful Communities” plan “Thus, despite the fact that the Agreement has brought substantial improvements in the indicators of generalized violence and human rights violations related to the armed conflict with the FARC, it is worrisome that the aggressions against human rights defenders and social leaders have been exacerbated.”

This “dwarf” of the heirs of war in Colombia, grew exponentially in the first half of 2018; we will have to wait for the proposal of the new government to face this complex situation, as well as to hope that this response does not concentrate on an exclusively military and armed action, but rather deals with the structural causes of why these groups are still in force and getting adepts (mostly in poor people) whose only way out of precariousness, is still a salary from war.

Just as a final note, the enactment of Law 1908 of 2018 that already has Decree 1455 of 201822 as the regulatory standard, will be the legal platform for all these groups to be deactivated in a peaceful manner and cease their violent activities. Everything will then depend on the capacity for dialogue and concertation of the Duque government that has in its hands a powerful tool to the violence without resorting to war again.

Partial Justice

The Attorney General’s Office, apparently, accelerated the investigation for the crimes against defenders, in the last two years, as already mentioned. In its most recent communication letter, the investigating body pointed out that “Of the 178 social leaders who have been murdered between 2016 and 2018, according to the UN list, homicide authorship has been established in 50% of the cases. Due to this, 184 people have been captured, accused of those crimes, and, in total, 211 have been linked to the investigations.”23

It is absolutely necessary to recognize that these are historical advances for this entity that before 2016 did nothing to investigate crimes against defenders. However, it is also necessary to recognize that to reach such progress, the OHCHR has played a determining role. Since 2015, under the administration of Eduardo Montealegre, the Office of the Prosecutor began to receive technical support from the OHCHR on the methodological route for crimes against defenders, on how to identify them and, above all, on-site verification of cases. In the current administration of Prosecutor Martínez, this alliance was strengthened and other government institutions (Presidency, Vice Presidency, Ministry of the Interior, Ministry of Defense) validated the cases reported by OACNUDH as those that should be prioritized and investigated and, ultimately, adopted the figure of this UN office as the official figure of the Government of Colombia.

Although this effort to prioritize the Government and above all of the Attorney General’s Office is important, it is not enough, given that a greater number of cases of homicides reported by both civil society organizations and other State institutions, among them the Ombudsman’s Office, are not taken into account. In this regard, and without the intention of concentrating the discussion on the figures, it is important to clarify that each of the national and international institutions and organizations such as OACNUDH have their own analysis methodology and field work, which is why the government should not prioritize in their actions one methodology over others, but on the contrary, should address in its entirety the reported cases - and not keep the smallest number - to clarify the kinds of victims, the motives of the events, the alleged material and intellectual authors and provide a response to the victims in matters of justice, truth and reparation.

It is not clear if this attitude of the Government and the Attorney General’s Office has any political interest in ignoring the real proportion of the homicide phenomenon against leaders, what is certain is that it is a partial view of the search for justice for the hundreds of murders reported since 2016 and previous years.

On the other hand, and in order to give an overview of the levels of impunity and procedural advance on the cases of murders of leaders in the last 8 years, the Program consulted directly with the Attorney General’s Office regarding the state of investigations for 563 cases of homicides registered by the Information System of the We Are Defenders Program between 2009 and 2017. These are the results:

This measurement allows to deduce that there is an effective scope of justice in 49 cases (8.6%) in which there is a sentence (condemnatory or acquittal). In other words, in 91.4% of the cases of the murder of human rights defenders between 2009 and 2017, justice has not yet been achieved and could be understood as cases that continue to be in impunity. It is true that this task is not exclusive of the Attorney General’s Office and it involves the silent judicial power of the country in an important way. However, a judge can and should give greater results, according to the current justice system, as long as the previous investigation made by the Attorney General’s Office offers celerity and quality.

On the other hand, it is important to highlight a significant procedural advance of the investigations in 155 cases (27.5%) which correspond to cases of Investigation, Trial and Arrest Warrant. And here it is important to clarify a term that has been created by the Attorney General as a synonym of decrease in Impunity that focuses in a lingering way. In several interventions, Attorney General Martinez has referred to the clarification, that is, the progress of an investigation, as if it was a reduction of impunity, a situation that can only be achieved when there is a sentence. In short, “clarification” is not equal to “decrease in impunity”. Clarification is simply showing indexes that the Attorney General’s Office is finally doing its job: investigating.

And the Attorney General’s Office has announced with a lot of media resonance that 50% of the cases investigated have already been clarified; it could be assumed that it is at least 300 processes, which is not true, since he refers to 181 cases of the last two years; while the SIADDHH Information System registers 609 murders in the two presidential periods of Juan Manuel Santos. To this is added that there are only 16 sentences in two and a half years of prioritization of cases of the Attorney General’s Office, which indicates that there is only effective justice in 8.5% of these cases.

In the middle of this scenario, and judging by the information delivered by the Public Prosecutor in cases from 2009 to 2017, the investigation progress is recognized in 46 cases that were archived in the system and from their identification, courtesy of the Program in 2017, the investigations were reactivated. However, there are still cases that the Attorney General’s Office does not know or cannot find in its information systems. In the measurement made in 2017, 56 cases were identified, for the 2018 measurement there are 46 cases not found. Although there are 10 cases that the Attorney General’s Office already “found”, there is still concern about the dispersion of information in the entity and the treatment of these data with reference to the historical cases of assassinations against leaders.

Finally, we draw attention to the fact that although the Attorney General’s Office prioritized cases from 2016, it cannot forget its responsibility in the investigation of all murders of human rights defenders of previous years, since to this date there is a high percentage (64%) without procedural advance. We must of course celebrate that there are investigative advances, that finally sentences are produced and, of course, that the Office of the Prosecutor has substantially changed its position regarding crimes against defenders, but we must not lose sight of the fact that the volume of cases is greater, that it is obliged to give an account of all reported cases and above all, that it should start to promote investigations for other aggressions such as threats, attacks, disappearances to name a few, in order to foresee the death of these leaders, to try and achieve that justice is not only partial.

The Three Musketeers?

The Public Ministry also showed signs of life in the first half of 2018 on the issue of defenders. The Solicitor General’s Office, the Ombudsman’s Office and the actions of the legal entities have taken into account the situation of the social leaders and defenders of Human Rights and have proposed actions to deal more thoroughly with the issue. This is evidenced in reports, pronouncements and public actions. However, this approach is still done separately by each institution and, on the contrary, it requires more inter-institutional work to concretize the good intentions and actions that are now being carried out. Following are some of them:

The creation of the Board for the Protection of Life must become a space that encourages the investigation and punishment of state officials at all levels (local, regional and national) around the fulfillment of their functions of prevention, protection or investigation. Ombudsman's Office | SAT strengthening by Decree 2124 of 201721. Although this is a norm derived from the Havana agreements, the Ombudsman's Office and its SAT instrument has increased its prevention action by issuing at least 65 early warnings for the first semester of 2018, which allows to have qualified information to face the structural risks of social leaders. Risk Report 010-1722 and Early Warning 026-1823. During the last two years, the Ombudsman’s Office has warned, with increasing precision, the risk scenarios faced by HR leaders and defenders in the country. In fact, the issuance of these specific alerts on social leaders allowed the National Government to count on key elements to advance preventive issues, but it did not have the necessary vehemence. A reason for concern is that before this last alert (026-18) the Ministry of the Interior issued progress24 that, to this date, do not have a true document that accounts for such advance in monitoring this alert. Ombudsman’s Regional Presence. In the last period, their regional presence has been a characteristic of this defense institution, at the head of its community and regional defenders and the National People’s Defender. This accompaniment to communities and leaders in the field has placed in situations of danger even leaders and staff of the entity, as was the case of the kidnapping of the leader Iber Angulo in Buenaventura25. | Improve early warning recommendations. Although these alerts contain substantial information to determine the levels of risk in the regions, it is necessary to expand and specify in greater detail the recommendations that these reports contain so that the decision makers can be clear about the procedure to be followed. Periodic publication of information about aggressions against leaders. Although the Ombudsman is the only institution of the State and Government that is given the task of collecting and systematizing information on murders of social leaders, this information does not have an update in real time and for specific periods of time, as it is the case of the first semester of 2018 since they handle general figures from 2016 without any details on the information.

Personerías (Legal Representatives) | Portrait of Territorial Realities in the Post Agreement. The National Federation of Personeros - FENALPER has conducted an interesting exercise to characterize the effects on the most vulnerable communities after the peace agreement, including social leaders and defenders. This exercise is one of the first analyzes in which the representatives link the defenders and identify them as key elements for the construction of peace. | Effective and visible joint work. Although in the field the representatives work hand in hand with many local leaders (who are the victims of most aggressions) it is necessary for this joint action to be more visible, in order to provide guarantees to their exercise of democratic construction and not only to local opposition to unfair situations or political and economic interests adverse to communities.

These three institutions have made important multilevel efforts (local, regional, national and international) for the defenders and social leaders, however, this action continues to be disjointed within the Public Ministry itself, to which they all belong. In this way, these institutions could become “the three musketeers” that support and defend the social leaders from the institutional framework, but they still need to do a systemic work so that their results are translated into a reduction of attacks against human rights defenders.

International Pressure and Observance

The situation of crimes against human rights defenders, and the implementation of peace agreements, has had Colombia in the eye of international observation during the last semester. In the most important multilateral political instances, the issue was a matter of discussion and emission of messages of concern to stop not only the wave of crimes, but also to provide guarantees for the participation of these activists.

The Chancellery of María Ángela Holguín and the Santos government team, defended their work by exposing over and over again the budgets in protection that the National Protection Unit executes. However, the figures are overwhelming and the voices of help from Colombia continue to emerge, as seen on the “Velaton” in which Colombians and foreigners in more than 10 countries in America, Europe and Asia joined about 20,000 people in Colombia who lit a candle for the lives of defenders. These are some of the most important pronouncements:

• Universal Periodical Exam of the UN\textsuperscript{28}: On May 10, 2018, Colombia went through the exam on Human Rights, which this multilateral organization performs on the member countries with reports of human rights violations. Although there was a share of congratulations to the Colombian State for signing the peace agreement with the FARC, other results of this exercise were quite opposite to the Santos Government, since one of the biggest concerns of the intervening countries involved in the exam was the murders and the lack of protection of social leaders\textsuperscript{29}.

• Security Council of the UN\textsuperscript{30}: In the framework of the Third Report to the United Nations Security Council on the Verification Mission in Colombia, it was indicated as a high concern “The increase in the number of deaths of social leaders and human rights defenders, in a dynamics of violence that continues affecting mainly the rural areas of the country. The need to accelerate progress in the implementation of productive income-generating projects for former combatants. And move forward in the task of “consolidating peace”, as uncertainty persists on issues such as legal guarantees”\textsuperscript{31}. This council called for urgent measures by the Government to stop such situation.

• Academic Visit UN Special Rapporteur for Defenders\textsuperscript{32}: Michel Forst, UN Special Rapporteur for human rights defenders, was in Colombia on an academic visit from July 28 to August 1, 2018. This visit was made possible thanks to the articulation of the National University of Colombia with more than 10 Colombian organizations and human rights platforms and 40 international organizations that support Colombia in Human Rights. This visit, in spite of being academic, allowed a key approach between the Colombian defenders and the rapporteur as well as informal interviews with State and Government entities. One of the most important results of this visit was to join the efforts of the Attorney General’s Office, the Ombudsman’s Office, the human rights organizations in the commitment to protect the lives of these leaders and the joint search for solutions, in view of a possible official visit of the rapporteur.

• Pronouncement of the European Parliament: In a letter dated July 13, 2018, 38 members of the Eu-

European Parliament members expressed their deep concern about the systematic murder of social leaders in the country before the High Representative on Security issues and Vice President of the European Commission of the European Parliament, Madama Morgherini. The letter urges the European parliament to take actions to support leaders in cases of threat in the context of actions such as the defense of territory in Hidroituango or the civic strike of Buenaventura.

- U.S. Congressmen Pronouncement: By means of a communication letter, 73 Republican congressmen and democrats of the United States expressed to the President of that nation Donald Trump, their concern for what they describe “the alarming increase in murders of social leaders and human rights defenders in Colombia”. In this letter, the Department of State and USAID are asked to secure resources and aid to Colombia as it faces a human rights crisis at a time of transition to peace.

- OEA/CIDH: The Inter-American Commission on Human Rights (IACHR) expressed its concern about the high number of murders of human rights defenders and social leaders registered this year in Colombia and stated that “the State is urged to take urgent measures to protect those who defend human rights in the country, as well as carrying out diligent investigations that take into account the human rights defense activity of the victims.” Although the IACHR acknowledged the regulatory advances in protection, it also urged the Colombian State to take urgent measures to stop these deaths.

These pronouncements of institutions and influential scenarios in the international arena were joined by the always diligent and necessary action and pronouncements of the diplomatic delegations in Colombia of sensitive countries such as Norway, Sweden, Switzerland, Germany, France, Spain, United Kingdom and United States among others; along with the efforts of the United Nations system agencies in Colombia that, led by the OACNUDH, day after day support the action of protection and respect for human rights defenders in Colombia.

Santos: 8 Years of Dialogues and Results on Paper

Santos as president and the government he represented, marked a dividing line with previous governments by establishing constant bridges of dialogue with civil society. Like no other...
previous administration, the one led by Santos always recognized the role of defenders in Colombia and made them part of important discussions for the country, either by will or by pressure. The Presidency of the now holder of a Nobel Peace Prize, in fact, took over many of the flags of social movement and made them its own, that is the case of the negotiated solution to the conflict or the recognition of the victims as the fundamental axis of the construction of a real State of law.

However, the Santos era is now over, and despite the vocation for dialogue and permanent recognition, it left behind a bittersweet landscape for human rights defenders. Although during these eight years of government, Juan Manuel Santos took the lead on topics such as the recognition of the victims, the land restitution law and the complex path of peace dialogues with the FARC and ELN (with the first group, the achievement of a real Agreement but with thousands of difficulties for its implementation); the Presidency of Santos was characterized by the opening of dozens of dialogue tables, interlocution and concertation tables held during his mandate, according to him, to build in a participative way, but in practice, without palpable material results.

This excess of tables and scenarios resulted in a broad package of laws, norms, decrees and resolutions that, in the face of the change of government, falter in their sustenance and even more in their application. In short, the Santos government was a mandate in the middle of the dialogue with results on paper. Scenarios such as the National Guarantees Roundtable (with 9 years of existence), National Commission for the declassification of Intelligence Archives (with 5 years of existence) or the National Commission of Security Guarantees (with 2 years of existence) are samples of the previous thesis; all these spaces, in which human rights defenders participate, had tiny advances compared to the volume of problems to be solved.

And this action of the Santos Government was until his last day of government. On July 10, at the last minute and due to a wave leaders’ assassinations, President Santos summoned an extraordinary meeting of the National Commission of Security Guarantees, to take urgent measures before the increase of murders. Eight measures were taken by the president in that session, which in general terms did not have any novelty of what has already been done in terms of armed force response. Four of the measures adopted are of a military nature, headed by the Ministry of Defense; more resources for individual and material protection (UNP), a perspective highly questioned by its limited scope and economically burdensome. The other provisions, so basic and precarious for the situation, end up being political comics: A direct window in the Ministry of the Interior for complaints against threats to social leaders, and the rewards system, which is already public knowledge of its results. For the rest, collect early warnings and increase from 4 to 10 prioritized municipalities to implement Decree 660 for the protection of communities. In conclusion, many meetings, tablecloths, provisions, rules, calls, militarization, but overflowing violence in many territories.

In terms of defenders, protection and guarantees, it is worthwhile to review the performance of the ministries. In previous reports of the Program We Are Defenders, the progress of each institution has already been acknowledged, however, given the context of aggression, in this report we will see what are the unpaid debts that each ministry is left with:

Ministry of the Interior: Germán Vargas Lleras (2010 -2012), Federico Renjifo (2012), Fernando Carrillo Flórez (2012 -2013), Aurelio Iragorri Valencia (2013-2014), Juan Fernando Cristo Bustos (2014 -2017) and Guillermo Rivera Flórez (2017 -2018) had in their hands the task of building, promoting and implementing public policy, political and executive actions to safeguard the action of human rights defenders in these 8 years. Unfortunately, the balance is not very encouraging.

It modified the Protection Program for people at risk and converted it into a transversal decree that would create the UNP and focus protection on individual measures, exclusively material. Only at the end of the Santos administration and thanks to the possibilities emanating from the Peace Agreements with the FARC, could the decrees be responsible for measures with a differential approach (gender and ethnic group) and collective rights to defenders and their organizations.

Although it was one of its primary responsibilities, all interior ministers “slipped” when it came to creating and implementing mechanisms to prevent violence against defenders. This is a pending task and is one of the great debts of this ministry with the defenders. All the ministers were at the head of the National Guarantees Process with the human rights platforms and although the government made progress in overcoming the stigmatization, there were few results in the construction of a public policy related to the protection of leaders, which remains cornered in a formal space concerning the production of normativity which still does not materialize; facing a null advance in subjects of policy of prevention, situation that did not start in the past government.

At the last minute, this Ministry published Decree 660 of April 2018, which creates the Comprehensive Security and Protection Program for communities and organizations in the territories, that is, for the protection of communities and organizations at high risk of being attacked. However, a series of doubts remained after its formulation. On one hand, it is a decree that could easily be replaced by another and its scope is very limited for other instances of the State and the government itself. On the other, it is possible that the Duque government does not assume it since it is an inconvenient heritage from Santos.

National Protection Unity: Andrés Villamizar (2011 - 2013) and Diego Mora (2014-2018) were in charge of this new institution, derived from the Ministry of the Interior and created by Germán Vargas Lleras, but whose promoters were the human rights platforms and with a focus on rights and not on security as it finally was. It had a rather questionable start due to serious corruption problems initially discovered by the Office of the Attorney General\(^37\) and then confirmed by the Comptroller General of the Nation. These mismanagements made under the administration of Andrés Villamizar (today investigated by the Solicitor General’s Office for these facts \(^38\)) they were the subject of systematic denunciation by the organizations defending human rights, among them the SIADDHH report “La Divina Comedia” (The Divine Comedy) in 2014\(^39\).

After this scandal, and under the administration of Mora, the entity took another direction but the doubts were sown in the community of defenders for its dubious procedures and the resumes of those who protect these activists (several of them from the DAS), as well as the disproportionate budget that is invested in the protection of all types of people at risk, not only human rights defenders.

In the last stage of this government, the UNP initiated pilots for the implementation of collective protection measures but the ignorance on the subject and the disproportionate amount of collectives that have requested this resource, did not allow to advance effectively in the matter; another pending issue for the UNP under the Duque government.

Vice Presidency: Angelino Garzón (2010 - 2014), Germán Vargas Lleras (2014-2017) and Oscar Naranjo (2017-2018) took over of this instance of the Santos government, and their participation in the issue of defenders was quite ambivalent. There was never a clear mandate about what their duties were in the matter and many times their performance on the subject was interpreted as “cosmetic” or “to muddle through”. During those eight years, there was a kind of overlap of their mandate in Human Rights with the Ministry of the Interior, a portfolio that has it constitutionally. This crossing of agendas wore down the human rights movement in issues of guarantees, protection and Action Plan in Human Rights, as it was not clear to whom it belonged.

Ministry of Defense: Rodrigo Rivera (2010-2011), Juan Carlos Pinzón (2011-2015) and Luis Carlos Villegas (2015-2018) were the representatives of the ministry with the greatest resistance to the action of human rights defenders. Their attitude towards the defense of the rights of indigenous peoples, Afros and peasants manifested through social mobilization and public actions, was the repression through the ESMAD of the National Police and even, the joint action of the Police - Army to stop the social protest in departments such as Cauca, Chocó, Antioquia and Valle del Cauca, among others. To such a point came the resistance of this ministry that its last director, Luis Carlos Villegas, naturalized the increase of crimes against social leaders between 2016-2018 when relating it to “intimate conflicts” of the defenders, devoid of political reasons or in relation to their action of human rights defense\textsuperscript{40}. This statement earned him a number of criticisms and despite the fact that the human rights movement asked for his retraction or correction, he stood by it.

Ministry of Foreign Affairs: María Ángela Holguín (2010-2018). This senior government official Santos was quite reluctant to many of the actions of denunciation of human rights organizations in areas such as the IACHR, the EU, the US Department of State and the UN in its various instances. Although she did enjoy a conciliatory and respectful speech with the defenders, she was a staunch enemy of the permanence of the OHCHR in Colombia, considering it unnecessary. Nor did she share the usual dialogue with the tripartite human rights movement, that is, government, society and international community.

Ministry of Finance: Juan Carlos Echeverry (2010-2012) and Mauricio Cárdenas (2012-2018) were the ministers who completely ignored the issue of the human rights defenders and the plans and programs proposed for their protection and prevention of violence. Many of the initiatives of other ministries and executive offices were cut short by the impossibility of accessing public resources for financing. Thus, it would seem that for the Ministry of Finance the issue of defenders is unnecessary and of little economic and political profitability for the Government, perhaps because it is not an investment line, but an unnecessary expense.

The Santos Government leaves behind a country with a difficult but real opportunity for peace. However, in its process, 3882 social leaders and human rights defenders were victims of some type of aggression and at least 600 of them were killed. A bittersweet result for the Nobel Peace Prize.

Duque: The Big Question

“The Heart of the Nation... The social leaders are the Heart of the Nation” said the new President of Colombia, Iván Duque, in his inauguration speech, regretting the murders of these activists in recent years. However, the subject was quite elusive during his campaign. There are no known plans or proposals of President Duque to this date, which would address the problem on how to stop the wave of murders and aggressions of the recent years. However, once elected, he had a couple of appearances talking about the issue in a meeting with the Ombudsman Carlos Negret, where he promised joint work to face the situation.\(^1\)

This makes the new President and his government remains a mystery to defenders, as they ignore what is his clearest and strongest position on the subject, and especially the silence of the Minister of the Interior, Nancy Patricia Gutiérrez, responsible for the issue, and the false start of the new Minister of Defense, Guillermo Botero in front of the social protest.

However, the assistance and commitment of President Duque with the meeting in Apartadó, Antioquia, on August 23, summoned by the Attorney General in the framework of the Board for the Protection of Life, where he also signed the “Pact for Life and the Protection of social leaders and human rights defenders”, opens an indicator to measure the new government in this matter and say for now that “nothing is written in stone” and that surely Duque will take distance from the close positions of the former president Uribe and the Democratic Center in relation to human rights defenders.

In terms of peace, an indissoluble axis of human rights, the outgoing Government left a path that was went through and marked, in many circumstances, by the peace accords with the FARC. And apparently, that should be one of the first tasks after the Santos era: To de-sanctify peace; that is, make the agreement and its implementation overcome the political hatred and have a clear determination of the executive power to implement them, moving away a little from the apocalyptic vision on peace with the FARC that the party that made Duque our president has: The Democratic Center.

Two years later, the agreement had a significant impact on the most vulnerable communities, those who have suffered the war and those who still believe in the construction of peace and the possibility of social justice and democracy in their territories. An indicator of this could be the significant increase in the voting turnout during the last elections that exceeded the 50%\(^{42}\) barrier of the current electoral census. Undoubtedly, the role of social leaders in these processes is crucial, hence the violence against these people is the strategy of adverse interests to change, to get them out of the way.

Precisely in this matter (protection and guarantees to defenders, as well as preventive actions to stop the aggressions against them), the Peace Agreement offers a significant package of new norms and guidelines, that if implemented, could contribute to stop the affectation to this population.

As evidenced in the previous report “A Stone in the Shoe”\(^{43}\) of the Program,

\(^{42}\) https://www.elespectador.com/noticias/politica/por-fin-con-el-53-los-votos-le-ganaron-la-abstencion-articulo-791085

\(^{43}\) https://www.somosdefensores.org/index.php/en/publicaciones/informes-siaddhh/149-
there are at least 21 provisions in the peace agreement that help the protection and security guarantees. In the next graph we list these provisions again thanks to the Kroc Institute, with the actions of progress in implementation and specific recommendations for the next government to carry them out, see insert folding.

Of these provisions, there are at least 10 that would guarantee, if implemented in its entirety, that the violence against social leaders would decrease, however only 3 have started minimally, 1 has an average level of progress and 6 are still in 0% implementation[^44].

The above mentioned (the strict monitoring done by the Kroc Institute and the low level of implementation of the measures) is a clear message to the new government of Duque to continue the task already started by Santos and to not waste years of dialogue, dissertation and creation of policy, which would contribute to curbing violence against defenders.

But unfortunately the first statements by officials of the new government are not encouraging. In July 2018 and still without taking office, neither President Duque nor his ministers, Guillermo Botero, now Minister of Defense, “placed the finger on the wound” with one of the most complex situations affecting social leaders and their communities: The social protest. The current Minister, who comes from the business sector, said that “…In the social field, we respect social protests, but we also believe that it must be an orderly protest that truly represents the interests of all Colombians and not just a small group.”[^45]

This first public pronouncement generated even more concern, since the public and peaceful demonstration is a human right that derives from the rights to freedom of expression and assembly and to try to regulate it and / or “put it in order” is, in a democratic country, a contradiction. Likewise, the attempt to appoint Claudia Ortiz (a radical member of the Democratic Center party and very close to the harshest line of the retired military) as director of the National Protection Unit, the main institution responsible for the protection of leaders and defenders, worries to a great degree, due to her derogatory political position towards those that she would have the responsibility to protect[^46]. Given this, President Duque had to abstain from the designation, due to the reaction and pressure on social networks.

These first outlines of political radicalism, generate an environment of fear in the community of defenders taking into account that eight years with Santos allowed spaces for dialogue that offered medium results and with attitudes and positions such as those

The members of the new political party, the Specialized Security and Protection Body (SISUP) of Colombia, have been participating in a training program in self-protection. This program is led by the Technical Board of the FARC-EP, which is responsible for the reincorporation of former combatants. The training includes modules on legal political activity, venues and activities, and the evaluation of personal risk for each person involved. The training program is part of the implementation of the Horus II Plan, which includes the control and prevention of illicit crops in the country. The program is also intended to address the problem of illicit crops, which is a major issue in the country.

mentioned above, it is expected that there will be a suffocation for these said spaces in such a way that they become exhausted and disappear. It will then be the task of civil society, supported by the international community, to make a detailed observation and follow-up so that this does not happen.

Business Peace

Finally, to close this section of politics, peace and human rights defenders, it is not possible to miss a central issue in the discussion of the future of peace and defenders: The role of the private business. The participation of the powerful Colombian business sector in the political decisions of the country has never been more evident before. Leading the National Trade Union Council and the Business Council for a Sustainable Peace (formed by the National Trade Union Council, Competitiveness Council and ANDI), he took advantage not only in supporting Iván Duque in his career as president\(^\text{47}\), also in the discussions during the dialogue process with the FARC\(^\text{48}\), after the victory of the ‘NO’ in the plebiscite\(^\text{49}\); and also in the modifications to the peace agreement before its signature\(^\text{50}\). It even suggested conditioning the continuity of the dialogue process with the ELN\(^\text{51}\). In the final phase of the government Santos they pronounced against the decrees that promulgated on social protest, the black line in the Sierra Nevada de Santa Marta and the delimitation in the environmental reserve areas\(^\text{52}\).

The intervention of the Colombian business community also played a role in the designation of the new Duque cabinet, since 90% of them comes from the business sector\(^\text{53}\) with profiles technically very well trained but with little experience in social issues such as the protection of human rights defenders. An example of this was the attempt to appoint Claudia Ortiz as Director of the UNP (very close to the retired military of the country and with a well-known disdain for social organizations). Of course, the business community also spoke out in favor of stopping the crimes against social leaders and proposed a joint action to identify the cases and have certain information on the subject\(^\text{54}\).

Both the designation of this “business” cabinet and the intervention of the National Trade Union Council in the peace issues, makes it foresee that in the coming years the implementation (or modification) of the peace agreements with the FARC, as well as the possible continuity of Negotiations with the ELN will have to go through the endorsement of this Council, which will result in a kind of “business peace” in which the interests of large capitals of the country are not affected by these agreements. This can be a contradiction considering that one of the main problems of the country and that originated the war, was the concentration of the land and where the entrepreneurs are the owners of the majority of the productive lands of the nation and the distribution of those is the most inequitable of the continent.\footnote{https://sostenibilidad.semana.com/impacto/articulo/concentracion-de-la-tierra-en-colombia-el-1-por-ciento-de-las-fincas-mas-grandes-ocupan-el-81-por-ciento-de-la-tierra/40882}

Another worrisome element is the participation of entrepreneurs behind the war as funders or sponsors. In this sense, important reports during 2018 such as the Attorney General’s Office entitled Systematic Violence against defenders of territorial rights in Colombia\footnote{https://verdadabierta.com/violencia-defensores-derechos-territoriales-sistematica-generalizada-procuraduria/} demonstrated how palm entrepreneurs and others would be behind the violence against social leaders and communities in Urabá. Faced with this, the National Trade Union Council also criticized the role of the Special Justice for Peace, which shall precisely have the task of unveiling the links between businessmen and armed actors during the conflict;\footnote{http://www.wradio.com.co/noticias/actualidad/consejo-gremial-hace-fuerces-criticas-a-la-jep/20171024/nota/3617474.aspx} such would be the pressure of this council that the previous Minister of the Interior had to modify several articles of this justice.\footnote{https://www.dinero.com/pais/articulo/ministerio-del-interior-modifica-jep-por-consejo-gremial/251758} Although both the National Trade Union Council and the Business Council for a Sustainable Peace do not represent the entire Colombian business community, the future role of these “heavyweights” of the national economy in the political discussions of peace in the country is a matter of analysis.

Many doubts, uncertainties and fears are lingering around the new National Government facing the fate of the peace processes, the guarantees of human rights, the fate of social movements, the political opposition, given the adverse position that the government party, the Democratic Center, has had before them. However, we must insist that nothing is written in stone and a new period just begins where the international community has its commitment to give continuity to the progress made by the previous government in these matters and has already expressed their concerns. Surely that international pressure, but also the broad political, social, academic, environmental, artistic, feminist and other sectors that were counted in an important way in the presidential elections, will make that path traveled to continue to be constructed despite the contrary announcements.
According to the registry made by the Information System on Attacks against Defenders of Human Rights -SIADDHH- of the Non-Governmental Program for the Protection of Human Rights Defenders - We are Defenders\(^59\), during the first six months of 2018, 397 defenders were victims of some type of aggression that put their lives and integrity at risk and hindered the legitimate and legal work of defending human rights in Colombia.

INDIVIDUAL AGGRESSIONS

In the first semester of 2018, an approximate increase of 16% is registered in the individual aggressions against defenders in relation to the same period in 2017. Between January and June of 2017 the SIADDHH reported 335 assaulted defenders; in 2018 in the same period, there were 397 cases.

When referring to the occurrence of these attacks per month, we see that the largest number of registered cases took place in May 2018 (presidential election month) with 115 assaults, followed by June with 77 assaults, April with 69, January with 64 and finally February with 44 cases and March with 28 attacks respectively.

\(^{59}\) This System registers information known directly by the We Are Defenders Program and by direct source with the Social Organizations and Non-Governmental Organizations that report cases to the Program.
With regard to the aggressions by gender, it is said that out of the 397 defenders attacked between January and June in 2018, 74% were men and 26% were women. Violence against female human rights defenders increased again in the period of January - June with respect to the same period in 2017, which reported 24% of assaults.

In the period of time covered by this report, information was gathered that accounts for seven types of aggression against human rights defenders in Colombia: Assassinations, attacks, threats, arbitrary detentions and arbitrary use of the penal system, disappearances and information theft. From the analysis of the figures it is possible to determine an important increase in the murders, prosecutions (or arbitrary use of the penal system), information theft and disappearances of social leaders in the semester with respect to the measurement of 2017.
"Human Rights defenders and peasant, communal, community, indigenous and Afro leaders were the common target of the aggressions during the first semester of 2018."

Assassination of Defenders

In the first semester the homicide figures increased again; between 2016 and 2017 we show a 31% increase in homicides. It went from 35 cases reported in the first half of 2016 to 51 defenders and social leaders killed in the first six months of 2017. In 2018 there are 77 cases of murder, which means an increase of 34%. Next, we review their names, in recognition of their work, so that they are not forgotten and justice is done.

"On average, between January and June 2018, two defenders were attacked every day and every other day one of them was murdered"

Out of the 77 murders, 96.1% corresponded to men (74 cases) and 3.9% to women (3 women); it should be noted that there has been a significant decrease in the number of murders of female defenders that went from 7 cases registered in 2017 to 3 in 2018 in the same period (January - June). Caucá (13 cases), Antioquia (12 cases) and Norte de Santander (10 cases) are the departments with the highest number of defenders killed. Valle is next with 6 cases; Córdoba with 5 cases; Arauca, Chocó and Nariño with 4 cases each; Meta and Putumayo with 3; Risaralda, Bolívar, Caquetá and Santander with 2; and Quindío, Huila and Vichada with one case respectively. Of these 77 homicides, in 12 of them the consulted sources confirm that the defenders had denounced threats before their murder; in the remaining 65 cases no threats were reported or information was not available.

Likewise, out of the 77 homicides, 70 of them were carried out with firearms, 5 with a knife, 1 case product of beating and one case more product of other forms of violence. According to the reports received by the Program, 8 of the homicides reported were preceded by the disappearance of the defender and their body was later found. It was also evident that in one case, the body of the defender killed showed signs of torture and in 8 cases the murder was carried out with extreme cruelty (more than 5 shots). A key fact is that in 17 of the 77 cases there was affectation to third parties while the murder was perpetrated, which means that a relative, friend or close person was also assaulted in the act. This contrasts with the 5 cases of 2017 in which the same pattern occurred. This situation shows the derivation of the risks of the defenders to their families and circles of closest friends, and how it double affects social leaders and defenders, as their activity is seen as dangerous for those close to them and in many cases it generates social rejection, stigmatization and abandonment by family and friends. The pattern of affectation to third parties is a situation detected since 2009 that has been increasing in percentage terms.

It is worth noting that 70 of the 77 homicides were perpetrated through the SICARIATO (Hit men), modality in which one or several unknown and armed men burst into the defender’s home, near it or on roads that the leader passes and firearms are activated against their humanity causing their death. To date there is no information that the murdered defenders had state protection measures.

"Between January 2009 and June 2018, 609 human rights defenders in Colombia have been killed"

When reviewing the leaderships which are most affected by murders, in the first semester of 2018 we find that they are those associated with Community Action Boards, community work (especially in rural areas), peasant leaders and indigenous leaders that have the highest number of homicides (62 of the 77) that is, 80% of the cases.

The high levels of planning and monitoring by murderers of human rights defenders in Colombia are still evident. In 83% of cases, it is noticeable that crimes occur in the early hours of the morning or late at night when leaders either leave for or return from work, or are resting, and even several of them were preceded by the disappearance of the leader.

The alleged perpetrators of these homicides are still largely UNKNOWN, a number that increases in 2018. The increase in homicides by the Public Force as well as the ELN guerrillas and the emergence of the FARC’s dissidence as alleged perpetrators is truly worrisome. In 5 deaths. Although the Attorney General’s Office has indicated that 50% of the 178 murder cases between 2016 and 2018 that were reported to it by OACNUDH are already clarified, we do not have 2018 data from the Attorney General’s Office that allows us to determine what the stage of procedural progress on these murders is.

Individual Threats

In the January - June 2018 period, there were 272 threatened defenders throughout the country. It should be noted an increase of 18% in this type of aggression. This percentage increase contrasts with the decrease in threats identified in the same period of the previous year.

Of the alleged perpetrators of the threats in this semester, we find that a group of paramilitary origin has the greatest number of threats, the Colombian Gaitanist Self-Defense Groups, which registered 94 cases, followed by unknown actors who increase their percentage with 61 cases. Other denominations of paramilitary groups that are supposed to no longer exist, such as the “Clan Úsuga”, “Los Rastrojos” or “Urabeños” as well as organized crime gangs reported 32 cases. The reappearance in this list of guerrilla forces of insurgent origin, such as the Dissidences of the FARC and ELN deserve a separate mention, which although they have a small participation, they remain an important actor in the intimidation of human rights defenders.

“Product of these 77 murdered defenders, 77 peasant, communal, indigenous, union, victims and LGBTI processes, among others, they lose a leader, their training, their experience and recognition.”
In the same way, Cauca continues to register the largest number of defenders threatened with 55 cases, followed by Valle del Cauca with 37; Cesar with 28, Córdoba with 23, Norte de Santander with 16, Chocó with 15, Bogotá with 13, Antioquia with 12 and La Guajira with 11 cases closes the list of the departments with the highest figures of defenders threatened. It is extremely worrisome that departments such as Cesar, Córdoba, Norte de Santander, Chocó and La Guajira, which historically did not have a significant participation in threat rates, now appear in the first places. On the other hand, the threatening pamphlet continues being the most used method to threaten, with 156 defendants threatened through this mechanism (17 cases more than 2017), followed by direct harassment with 62 cases (43 cases more than 2017) and threatening calls with 35 cases to close this measurement.

The proliferation of pamphlets and direct intimidating acts as mechanisms of threats against defenders, suggests that these threatening actions are increasingly far from being in the hands of unknown persons and that in this way the investigation process can be made much faster to take judicial action against the perpetrators and prosecute them promptly. For this, the Santos government and the Attorney General’s Office succeeded in having the law 1908 of 2018 approved in the Congress of the Republic, which clearly establishes the crime of threat:

“Article 9°. Add article 188E to Law 599 of 2000, which will read as follows: Article 188E Threats against human rights defenders and public servants. Whoever that by any means intimidates or threatens a person who carries out activities of promotion and protection of human rights, or their relatives, or any organization dedicated to the defense of them, or political leaders, or trade unions communicating the intention to cause a constitutive damage of one or more crimes, by reason of or on the occasion of the function performed, shall incur a prison term of seventy-two (72) to one hundred and twenty-eight (128) months and a fine seventeen point seventy-seven (17.77) to two hundred minimum monthly legal salaries in force. The same penalty shall be incurred in when the conduct referred to in the preceding paragraph falls on a public servant or his family.”

With this legal provision, enshrined in a law of the Republic, it is expected that the investigation processes for this type of aggression, may have real advances.

ALLEGED RESPONSIBLES

About the alleged perpetrators or responsible for the 3397 attacks that occurred between January and June 2018, the SIADDHH registered, in most cases Paramilitaries with 187 cases, while in 151 cases the figure corresponds to those Unknown (44 more cases than in 2017). The members of state security forces (National Army, Police, SIJIN, Prosecutor’s Office among others) are registered in 21 cases with alleged responsibility in the attacks (their participation decreases with respect to 2017 with 30 cases). The guerrillas increase exponentially their participation in the aggressions going from 1 case with responsibility in the aggressions in 2017 to 38 cases in 2018.

AREAS OF AGGRESSION

Compared to the areas where there was the highest number of attacks in this semester, compared to the records for the same period in 2018, the departments of Cauca and Valle del Cauca still have the highest levels of aggression. In contrast there is a decrease in cases in Bogotá (from 43 cases to 18) and the department of Tolima (from 19 to 7 cases). In the case of Bogotá, the procedural fall of assaults is striking since in other measurements of previous years, the capital of the Republic was one of the areas with the greatest degree of aggression manifested in threats.

However, the departments of Norte de Santander, Cesar, Córdoba and La Guajira generate extreme concern since, during previous periods, their aggressions did not exceed 10 cases and in the present measurement, they appear in the first places with more than 20 cases each.

On the other hand, Antioquia increases slightly its participation in the aggressions, going from 23 to 26 cases. This is consistent with several early warnings generated by the Ombudsman’s SAT for these departments, without knowing to this date the institutional actions taken to mitigate such risk.

GENERAL CONCLUSIONS

After a look at some key aspects related to the situation of aggression against human rights defenders in the first semester of 2018, we risk the following general conclusions, which we hope will affect in some way the policies that the Colombian State has to take to start closing the cycles of violence:

1. It is true that the referential framework of figures and statistics that measure the phenomenon of violence against people who defend human rights in Colombia was broadened, especially in remote regions. However, instead of that being a negative or distorting element of reality, reaffirms that it is a growing, worrisome and sensitive situation for the continuity of the search for peace.

2. Once again it is acknowledged and emphasized that indeed the Office of the Attorney General of the Nation is gaining ground in the investigations regarding the murders against social leaders, in the face of the historical impunity that accompanies these events. Nevertheless, we believe that it should be a greater effort before the dimension of the problem and its long journey for so many years, because the emphasis or prioritization focuses on the last two and a half years, without hope for previous years. In the same way, as the Report shows, it is not healthy media management given by the accusing Agency to show conclusive and wide-ranging results in relation to the clarification of murders, when the reality is different. In terms of investigations regarding threats to social movements, peace initiatives, women’s platforms, trade union sectors and others, the results of the Attorney General’s Office and the National Police are null, despite the incessant work on the part of organized society and the many announcements in a decade of proliferation of threatening pamphlets rolling on the web and various territories of the country: About four thousand identified by the SIADDHH.

3. It is clear that the government of Juan Manuel Santos imprints into history the fact of having closed the armed conflict with the FARC and having left the process in an advanced stage with the ELN, in addition to the recognition of the victims as subjects of rights and a new institutionality for materializing these processes. However, the balance in relation to the right to life and personal integrity of human rights defenders goes red, more than 600 murders, and it is not fully comprehensible because they are leaders committed to building peace in their territories.
4. The role of other State entities such as the National Ombudsman’s Office and the Office of the Attorney General of the Nation is highlighted, as well as its media and institutional leadership to raise awareness of the critical situation of violence against social leadership and initiatives to raise awareness of the problem. But hopefully that effort will not be left alone, because beyond its mobilizing role, the centrality of its mandate is to discipline public officials who by action or omission favor the commission of these crimes, in no other way may the role of the Attorney General’s Office be complemented to identify the intellectual and material authors.

5. It is important to highlight that similar to the previous eight years, in the first semester of 2018, community leaders were the sector most affected by violence, followed by community, indigenous, agrarian and Afro-descendant leaders.

6. In relation to the most difficult territories for these activists there is also a sustained trend in recent years and the first half of 2018, where Cauca, Antioquia, Valle del Cauca, Chocó, Nariño and Norte de Santander, unfortunately stand out.

7. About the alleged responsible people in charge of the assassinations of social leaders, they are still the paramilitary and those registered as ‘unknown’, the ones mostly accused of committing such crimes. But Military Forces, the ELN and dissidence of the FARC also participate.

8. Women continue to be highly attacked, which, in addition to being disturbing, is outrageous, in a country where women’s and feminist movements have not stopped mobilizing against all kinds of violence, including gender-related, and against war. But also to express that in terms of judicial investigations, the cases of women are practically in total impunity.

9. It is expected that the new Government of Iván Duque gives continuity to the normative, legal and political routes drawn up by the government of Juan Manuel Santos and advance in the construction of the policy of guarantees for the free exercise of the defense of human rights and social leadership, for which it is always positive to maintain the dialogue with civil society and social movements.

10. Finally, we acknowledge, as always, the support and accompaniment of the international community represented in friendly governments of Human Rights and peace, cooperation agencies, multilateral organizations and solidarity organizations.
